

Department of Political Science

International Security Option

General Information

The study of international security focuses on the relationship between politics and security and examines the causes of war and the use and control of force: threats, promises, and the tactics, techniques, and ethics of violence. It teaches the theories and the historical context for understanding contemporary security issues.

The option is recommended for students interested in an in-depth study of international security. This is an optional program of study and not an official college major or minor. Students who elect this option must satisfy both the 50 credits required for the Political Science major and the 45 credits for the option. Up to 25 credits may overlap between the Political Science major and the option. No more than 20 credits may be used to satisfy both the option and the requirements for any other major. Non-Pol S courses count only toward requirements for the option, not for the Political Science major. Courses for the option must have a grade of 2.0 or higher.

If you complete the 45-credit international security option, you will receive the notation Political Science: International Security Option on your transcript after you graduate.

Declare the option when you have completed at least 6 courses or when you apply to graduate. The Political Science Advising Office is located in 215 Smith Hall. If you have questions, call 543-1824 or email us at polsadvc@uw.edu.

International Security Colloquium (UWISC)

Students interested in the option are encouraged to attend the talks sponsored by the UW International Security Colloquium (UWISC). UWISC sponsors nine speakers a year from across the US and Europe, as well as UW faculty and students. For schedules see <https://www.polisci.washington.edu/events/uwisc-international-security-colloquium> or contact Professors Kier (ekier@uw.edu) or Mercer (mercer@uw.edu) for more information.

A list of elective courses for the option can be found on the second page
